

Michael Whartnaby has more than twenty years of experience in single-family residential design and large-scale, multi-family residential design with a focus on affordable housing, universally accessible housing, and sustainable design. He is a partner and chief energy geek at the architecture firm Thoughtful Balance. He is currently involved in several projects with a focus on energy efficiency and is a certified Passive house consultant. Michael holds a Bachelor of Architecture from Carnegie-Mellon University.